Increasing Regulations – How Operational and Human Data are Colliding to Meet the New Requirements

Topics to be presented include:

- Colorado has just undergone a massive regulatory overhaul in the oil and natural gas industry. Industry is working tirelessly on how to evolve process, planning and development to meet these new regulations.
- Public opinion and perception are now written into regulations like never before. Any business would struggle to achieve 100% public support in any sector. With oil and natural gas development being such a polarized topic, how can operators successfully navigate passionate public opposition through the permitting and execution phases of development?
- Learn how quantifying the human component is moving the needle on these passionate discussions and public debates.
