Energy Outlook of Türkiye in the Light of Regional and Global Dynamics

In a highly dynamic sector such as energy, which is intertwined with fields such as economy, environmental protection and foreign policy, how energy policies are determined and energy supply security is ensured are of utmost importance for all governments. In this framework, we will take a look at both the near-term policies and the medium-long term plans of Turkey, which is one of the most dynamic countries in the fields of energy and natural resources, and how energy security is ensured in a geography where regional dynamics are changing very rapidly.
